

Contents

Introduction

Journeys and silences (Garth Cant, Aotearoa New Zealand)

Resisting encroachment and re-establishing identity

The Alta case: national and international consequences (Henry Minde, Norway); South Sámi reindeer management and encroachment (Jan Åge Riseth, Norway); Paradigm shifts in Southern Sámi research (Åke Jünge, Norway); Globalisation from below: the revitalisation of a Coastal Sámi community (Torill Nyseth and Paul Pedersen, Norway).

Traditional identities and contemporary perspectives

Formalising Sámi land rights in Norway (Erling Berge), Sámi, citizenship and non-recognition in the EU (Rebecca Lawrence, Sweden); Hawaiian connection to the land (Katrina Oliveira, Hawai'i).

First Nations, parks and conservation

Conservation and Indigenous rights in Australia and Sweden (Michael Adams, Australia); Laponia II: Lapland's World Heritage Site? (Kristina Lasko, Sweden); Building wilderness: Te Urewera National Park (Chris Castagna, Hawai'i); Ngāi Tahu involvement in Coastal Management of Akaroa Harbour (Sarah Hemmingsen, Australia).

Shifting sands, shifting policies: Crown and Māori in New Zealand

Policy development in modern Aotearoa New Zealand (Anake Goodall); Ngāi Tahu in a contested post-colonial New Zealand (Garth Cant); 21st Century Crown confiscations: the Foreshore and Seabed Act (Angeline Greensill); Thinking globally, acting locally: international human rights and double standards? (Justine Inns).

Sustaining resilient communities: Asian experiences

Korean farmers building community networks (Cheong Ji Woong and Cheong Chija Kim); Participation in environmental management in Vietnam (Binh Vu Trong, Viet Nam) Fujian culture in Okinawa (Akiyoshi Takahashi and Li Guoqing); Hmong Gardeners cultivating knowledge, land and culture (Kathy De Master, Wisconsin).

Community actions and educational initiatives

Rural Aboriginal men and participatory action research (Yarrabah Men's Health Group, Australia); Representations of Aboriginal people in Australian schools (Pat Cavanagh); Teaching Indigenous studies at the University of Tromsø (Per Klemetsen Hætta and Else Grete Broderstad, Norway).

Discourses and Silences* has been published by the Department of Geography, at the University of Canterbury in New Zealand, on behalf of our counterparts: Norut Social Science Research and the University of Tromsø in Norway; the University of Hawai'i in the USA; the Australian Catholic University and the University of Wollongong in Australia; Waikato University in New Zealand.

The volume contains 23 chapters, maps, tables, figures and illustrations and runs to 336 pages. The ISBN is 0-473-10628-0.

The retail price is NOK 300. Postage and packing costs are additional. For orders from Europe, see <http://www.sami.uit.no/discourses/>